This introduction was written using the Storyteller Usifu Jalloh from the country of Sierra Leone as an example. It is important to mention both the Storyteller's name and place of origin in the introduction. If you have any doubts about the Storyteller's name or place of origin (pronunciation, etc.), please consult beforehand.

Good morning students. How are you today?

Students reply

Do you know why we are together today? Can anyone tell me?

Students reply: "There is a Storyteller!"

Yes, that's correct! Today we have a visit from the Storyteller Usifu Jalloh from the country of Sierra Leone. Can anyone tell me where Sierra Leone is?

Students reply: "Africa!"

Today Usifu is going to tell us stories in English. Now, it is not important that you understand every word. But it is important that you are good listeners, that you listen closely and respectfully. If you listen well, you will understand the meaning of the stories even if you don't understand every word. Also, if you listen well, you will have fun! So please, let's give Usifu a round of applause!

Students clap and the Storyteller walks to the front of the performance space
